

JULIAN AGYEMAN
Assistant Professor
Environmental Policy and Planning
Tufts University
julian.agyeman@tufts.edu

Julian Agyeman is Assistant Professor of Environmental Policy and Planning at Tufts University, Boston-Medford, USA. A long time activist, he was founder in 1987 of Britain's Black Environment Network and is co-editor of the international peer review journal 'Local Environment'. He has written widely on issues of sustainability and justice, including his latest book, 'Just Sustainabilities: Development in an Unequal World' (Earthscan/MIT Press 2003). He is a member of the National Academies Committee on the Transportation of Nuclear Waste and was a Member of the Massachusetts Environmental Justice Advisory Committee. He is Vice-President of the Institute for Sustainable Cities, a new association which aims to track trends and progress in community sustainability across the US.

VERONICA EADY
Professor
Department of Urban & Environmental Policy & Planning
Tufts University
veronica.eady@tufts.edu

Veronica Eady is member of the core faculty in the Department of Urban and Environmental Policy and Planning at Tufts University. Before joining Tufts, Ms. Eady worked as the Director of the Environmental Justice and Brownfields Programs for the Massachusetts Executive Office of Environmental Affairs where she authored the first-ever environmental justice policy and program for Massachusetts' environmental agencies. Ms. Eady is also the former executive director of Alternatives for Community and Environmental, an environmental justice law and education center in Roxbury, Massachusetts. Ms. Eady was a faculty member at Stanford Law School, running its Environmental Justice Clinic, and is a former visiting scholar at Golden Gate Law School in San Francisco and at Irkutsk State University in Irkutsk, Russia in where she helped create the first environmental law clinic in the Russian Federation. Ms. Eady the Acting Chair of EPA's federal advisory committee for environmental justice, the National Environmental Justice Advisory Council. She also serves on the Boards of Directors for Earth Island Institute in San Francisco, the Community Rights Council in Washington, DC and the Boston Greenspace Alliance. She is the author of "Environmental Justice in State Policy Decisions," Just Sustainability: Development in an Unequal World, ed. by Julian Agyeman, Bob Bullard, and Bob Evans. Earthscan and MIT Press.