C. RESEARCH AND SCHOLARSHIP

1. Grants and Contracts

- 2018 FAHSS Student Assistantship Program, Graduate Research Assistant, Spring 2018, FAHSS and Department of Sociology, University of Massachusetts Lowell. RA funded: $1,000. (I applied for and was given a Graduate Research Assistant who was paid for by the College of FAHSS and the Department of Sociology. During the Spring 2018 semester we conducted our research, which was a content analysis of children's literature on Helen Keller. I was able to mentor this student and he presented at the Annual Student Research & Community Engagement Symposium.)

- 2016 – 2017 Student-Scholar Partnership Program, Graduate Research Assistant, Spring 2017, Department of Sociology and FAHSS, University of Massachusetts Lowell. RA funded: $1,000. (In September 2016, I applied for a Research Assistant for a project that I did on the topic of Helen Keller. I was given a Graduate Research Assistant who was paid for by the Department of Sociology and the College of FAHSS. During the Spring 2017 semester we conducted this research. I was able to mentor this student and he presented at the Annual Student Research & Community Engagement Symposium.)
- 2016 Sabbatical, Fall 2016, University of Massachusetts Lowell.
- 2008 Center for Women in Politics & Public Policy Grant and Visiting Scholar Position, Spring 2008, University of Massachusetts Boston. Funded: $2,500.
- 2007 Pre-tenure Sabbatical, Fall 2007, University of Massachusetts Lowell.
- 2007 Faculty Fellows Award, Qualitative Research Network, University of Massachusetts Lowell. Funded: $1,500.

2. Academic and Professional Publications

Book:

- 2006 Najarian, Cheryl G. “Between Worlds” Deaf Women, Work, and Intersections of Gender and Ability. New York: Routledge. (I analyzed the educational, mothering, and paid work experiences of Deaf women. My book has been purchased by 215 College and University libraries worldwide and is known internationally for its analysis of disability and gender from a sociological perspective.)

Peer-reviewed articles in journals:

- 2021 Carey, Allison C. and Cheryl Najarian Souza. “Constructing the Sociology of Disability: An Analysis of Syllabi.” Teaching Sociology, 49 (1): 17 – 31. (Through a content analysis of 25 syllabi on Disability Studies related courses, we analyze common themes that arise and what people are studying in the field.)

- 2017 Najarian Souza, Cheryl. "‘I Play Golf With My Kids, Not My Colleagues:’ Politicians, Parenting, and Unpaid Work as a Choice?" Journal of Sociology & Social Welfare December 2017 XLIV (4): 45 – 71. (This article analyzes the unpaid work of parents and the paid work of 30 men and women politicians.)
- 2010 Najarian Souza, Cheryl. "Deaf Mothers: Communication, Activism, and the Family." Disability Studies Quarterly Fall 2010 30 (3/4). (This article analyzes the unpaid work and activism experiences of Deaf women. It can be found at the following address: <http://dsq-sds.org>.)
- 2008 Najarian, Cheryl G. "Deaf Women: Educational Experiences and Self Identity." Disability & Society 23 (2): 117 - 128. (I analyzed the educational experiences of Deaf women and discussed them being a linguistic minority in hearing schools. Disability & Society, is one of the leading international journals for disability studies research and is published seven times per year by Routledge. They have a 50% acceptance rate and the journal is available in over 4,000 places worldwide in print and online format.)
- 2006 Najarian, Cheryl G. "Deaf Mothers, Maternal Thinking, and Intersections of Gender and Ability." Scandinavian Journal of Disability Research 8 (2-3): 99 - 119. (I analyzed the mothering experiences of Deaf women. The Scandinavian Journal of Disability Research is one of the leading international journals for social research on disability and is published four times per year by Routledge. They have a 6.5% acceptance rate and the journal is available in over 4,000 places worldwide in print and online format. My article was cited by V. Singh and A. Ghai in their 2009 article which appeared in Disability & Society.)

Peer-reviewed article in edited books:

- Forthcoming Najarian Souza, Cheryl. "Intersections of ‘Disability,’ Gender, and Race: The Deaf Community, Blindness, and DeafBlind Activism in Families." Beyond Allies and Obstacles: Parent-Disability Activist Constituencies. Edited by Pamela Block, Allison C. Carey, and Richard Scotch. Temple University Press. I have a contract for this chapter and the forthcoming date is TBA. (I use a micro level approach to look at the memoirs of two Deaf-blind women, Helen Keller and Haben Girma, to analyze historical shifts in how these women think of themselves and the tensions between them and their able-bodied parents. I also use a macro level approach to look at three organizations and their websites to see how family operates when raising a family member who is labelled disabled, specifically Deaf, blind, or Deaf-blind.)

- 2020 Najarian Souza, Cheryl. "Reframing the Story of Helen Keller and Anne Sullivan: Resisting (Dis)ability Stereotypes Through an Analysis of Children's Literature." Research in Social Science and Disability: New Narratives of Disability: Constructions, Clashes, and Controversies volume 11: 11 - 26. Edited by Sara E. Green and Donileen R. Loseke. Emerald Publishing Limited. (This article provides a sociological analysis of common themes through a content analysis of 20 children's books on Helen Keller. The book, Research in Social Science and Disability, is an international series for research on disability and is published by Emerald Publishing Limited. The book was published in both hard copy form and on line in November 2019 and has a copyright date of 2020.)
- 2010 Najarian Souza, Cheryl. "Deaf Women's Work Experiences: Negotiating Gender, Ability, and Theories of Resistance." Research in Social Science and Disability: Disability as a Fluid State volume 5: 231 - 252. Edited by Barbara Altman and Sharon Barnartt. Emerald Group Publishing Limited. (This article analyzes the paid work experiences of Deaf women. The book, Research in Social Science and Disability, is an international series for research on disability and is published by Emerald Group Publishing Limited.)
- 2009 Najarian, Cheryl G. "Feminist Disability Theory." In O'Brien, Jodi and Shapiro, Eve (Eds), Encyclopedia of Gender and Society volume 2: 305 - 307. Sage Publications. (As an expert of gender and disability, I was invited to write an entry on this topic where I discussed the most recent research in this field. The encyclopedia is distinguished by cross-national and cross-cultural perspectives that provide comparative analyses of the life experiences of men and women around the world.)

Book reviews in peer-reviewed journals:

- 2010 Najarian Souza, Cheryl. Book Review of Longing and Belonging: Parents, Children, and Consumer Culture by Allison Pugh (2009). Berkeley: University of California Press. Journal of Sociology and Social Welfare September 2010 37 (3). (As a leading scholar on issues of work, family, and gender, I was asked to review this book which discusses families, consumerism, and social class.)
- 2007 Najarian, Cheryl G. Book Review of Not-So-Nuclear Families: Class, Gender, and Networks of Care by Karen V. Hansen (2005). New Jersey: Rutgers University Press. Humanity & Society 31 (2-3): 291 – 293. (As an expert scholar on work and family, I was asked to write a review of this book which addressed this topic.)

Other academic publications:

- 2006 Najarian, Cheryl G. “Deaf Mothers, Maternal Thinking, and Intersections of Gender and Ability.” Working Paper Series, Paper #06-02, Center for Women & Work, University of Massachusetts Lowell. (In this piece I provide an analysis of Deaf mothers. It was distributed at our annual Gathering at the Well, the 10th Anniversary Celebration, and other University wide events.)
- 2005 Najarian, Cheryl G. and Michele Paetow. “Learning From Each Other: Syracuse University and the OnCampus Program.” In Building Pedagogical Curb Cuts: Incorporating Disability in the University Classroom and Curriculum, by Collaborative Authors (editors). Syracuse: The Graduate School of Syracuse University. (This was an invited publication that is used by Syracuse University to illustrate the need for a discussion of disability, access, and issues of pedagogy. In our chapter, we discussed how students with autism from public high schools were a part of my Sociology of Family course and how I, as the instructor, assessed learning, grades, and building a classroom community where all benefited.)
- 2002 Najarian, Cheryl G. “Responding to Student Writing.” pp. 64 – 75, Ch. 6 in Using Writing to Teach, by Collaborative Authors (editors). Syracuse: The Graduate School of Syracuse University. (This was an invited publication and the book is distributed to all incoming Teaching Assistants who take part in a University wide Teaching Assistant Orientation at Syracuse University.)

Conference Presentations

Peer-reviewed presentations at conferences:

- 2022 “From Helen Keller to the Present: An Analysis of Contemporary Memoirs of Deaf-Blind Women over the Life Course.” Presented virtually at the Eastern Sociological Society Annual Meetings, March 2022, Boston, Massachusetts.
- 2020 Carey, Allison C. and Cheryl Najarian Souza. “Challenges and Triumphs of Teaching on the Concepts of Disability and Ability: A Content Analysis of Current Syllabi.” Presented virtually at the American Sociological Association 115th Annual Meetings, August 2020, San Francisco, California.
- 2019 “Whose Story, Whose Voice?: Helen Keller as Told Through Children’s Literature.” The Society for the Study of Social Problems 69th Annual Meetings, August 2019, New York City, New York.

- 2018 “Reframing the Story of Helen Keller and Anne Sullivan: Resisting (Dis)ability Stereotypes through an Analysis of Children’s Literature.” The Society for the Study of Social Problems 68th Annual Meetings, August 2018, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.
- 2017 “Narrative Constructions of Helen Keller: Where are we now and where do we go from here?” The Society for the Study of Social Problems 67th Annual Meetings, August 2017, Montreal, Quebec Canada.
- 2016 “‘I play golf with my kids, not my colleagues’: Men and Women Politicians and Unpaid Work as a Choice?,” Eastern Sociological Society Annual Meetings, March 2016, Boston, MA.
- 2015 “‘I would love to have a wife’: How Mom (and Dad) Politicians Navigate Gender and Social Class in their Work and Family Lives while Advocating for Social Justice,” Society for the Study of Social Problems Annual Meetings, August 2015, Chicago, IL.
- 2013 “The Public and Private Caregiving of Politicians in their Families and Communities,” Eastern Sociological Society Meetings, Boston, MA (Paper accepted and given to panel.).
- 2010 “Social Justice and Public Servants: How Legislators Balance Work and Family and Create Social Change,” Society for the Study of Social Problems Meetings, Atlanta, GA.
- 2010 “Not Just in Social Problems Courses: Social Justice, Reflexivity, and Teaching Research Methods,” Co-presented with Mignon Duffy at the Society for the Study of Social Problems Meetings, Atlanta, GA.
- 2008 “Public Sociologies in Practice: How Teaching Research Methods Engages our Students,” Co-presented with Mignon Duffy at the Association for Humanist Sociology Annual Meetings, Boston, MA. (We addressed how we have incorporated community service and discussions that think critically about research in our methods courses and linked it to the concept of public sociology to see how this benefits students and members of the community.)
- 2008 “Moms and Dads on the Hill: How Men and Women Politicians Balance Work and Family,” American Sociological Association Meetings, Boston, MA. (Through the use of in-depth interviews with thirty men and women state representatives and state senators in a northeastern state, the analysis focused on their paid work as caregivers in their communities and their unpaid work as mothers and fathers.)

- 2008 “Deaf Mothers: Communication, Activism, and the Family,” Society for the Study of Social Problems Meetings, Boston, MA. (Through qualitative life history interviews with ten college educated deaf women, this research looked at how these women developed strategies to resist being seen as disabled in some contexts and to resist being seen as mothers who, as seen by some, as not able to do this work. I argued that an analysis which includes an examination of gender and ability furthers our knowledge about how the concept of a mother is not only gendered, but also abled.)
- 2008 “Deaf Women Workers: Stories of Struggle as a Linguistic Minority,” Chancellor’s Inaugural Luncheon, University of Massachusetts Lowell, Lowell, MA. (In this poster presentation, I analyzed how members of the Deaf community are seen as a linguistic minority rather than as disabled.)
- 2007 “Deaf Women’s Work Experiences: Negotiating Gender, Ability, and Theories of Resistance,” Society for the Study of Social Problems Meetings, New York, NY. (I argued that these Deaf women developed strategies to resist being seen as disabled in some contexts and to resist being seen as mothers who cannot also perform paid work. They do this in an effort to be seen as legitimate workers as they seek to obtain jobs.)
- 2007 “The Public and Private Lives of Politicians: Negotiating Work, Family, and Public Policies,” Carework Conference, New York, NY. (In this presentation and research on politicians, I sought to increase our understandings of this group of professionals, to broaden our ideas of work, family, gender, carework, and to investigate how one’s personal experiences may have an impact on public policymaking.)
- 2007 “Language, Power, and Authority: Life Histories with Deaf Women and Feminist Qualitative Methodologies,” Qualitative Research Sharing Day, University of Massachusetts Lowell, Lowell, MA. (This presentation addressed ethical issues surrounding language translation, the use of interpreters in interviews, methods of transcribing in bilingual interviews, video taping respondents, and collaboration with the women of this study.)
- 2006 “Personal Responsibility and Deaf Women’s Work Experiences in the New Economy,” American Sociological Association Meetings, Montreal, Quebec, Canada. (Findings include that these Deaf women developed strategies, which include taking personal responsibility for social inclusion, using flexibility, working harder, and grappling with the double edged sword of technology. Although technological “advances” helped to include them, technology also socially excluded them from their colleagues.)
- 2006 “Deaf or deaf?: College Educated Deaf Women as Linguistic Minorities in Families and Schools,” Society for the Study of Social Problems

Meetings, Montreal, Quebec, Canada. (I argued that discovering or acknowledging deafness, parents' decisions about their educations, and their own decisions on education had a profound affect on the Deaf women's educational experiences and identities.)

- 2006 "Deaf Mothers, Maternal Thinking, and Intersections of Gender and Ability," Eastern Sociological Society Meetings, Boston, MA. (Using life history interviews with Deaf women, the analysis focused on their work as mothers and the connections with "maternal thinking," difference, and sameness. I argued that discussions about wanting hearing or deaf children and communication with children influenced their identities and were part of the disciplined practice of this work.)
- 2005 "Language, Legitimacy, and a Linguistic Minority: Deaf Women's Work Experiences," Diversity Challenge Conference, The Institute for the Study and Promotion of Race and Culture, Boston College, Chestnut Hill, MA. (I argued that the women actively resisted ideas of deafness as a "disability," did things to show how their deafness was "cultural," and showed how they were instead part of a linguistic minority.)
- 2005 "If I had Blue Eyes": Motherwork, Deafness, and Communication in Families," American Sociological Association Meetings, Philadelphia, PA. (Findings revealed that in deaf women's experiences with doctors, deciding on if they wanted hearing or deaf children, decisions about communication with their children, and how their extended families communicated all played a role in how the women negotiated their identities and places for themselves and their families.)
- 2005 "Negotiating Identities: Deaf Women's Communication at Home and Work," Society for the Study of Social Problems Meetings, Philadelphia, PA. (Findings revealed that all of the women spoke of being in between the worlds of the Deaf and the hearing in their work experiences. How they learned American Sign Language (ASL) and English in their schools and families and used them to communicate in their workplaces influenced how they saw themselves.)
- 2005 "'I'm not Native': Contributions of Life Histories with Deaf Women to Qualitative Methodologies," Society for the Study of Symbolic Interaction Meetings, Philadelphia, PA. (I discussed the implications of my social location as hearing and one who speaks Sign Exact English (SEE) and not American Sign Language (ASL). This paper also addressed ethical issues surrounding language translation, the use of interpreters in interviews, methods of transcribing in bilingual interviews, video taping respondents, and collaboration with the women of this study.)

- 2005 “Lifetime Educators and Self-Advocates’: Deaf Women’s Family and Educational Experiences,” Eastern Sociological Society Meetings, Washington, D.C. (I argued that the women assessed options, developed strategies of becoming “lifetime educators” and “self-advocates,” and carved out places in their educational settings.)
- 2005 “Between Worlds’: Deaf Women Workers as a Linguistic Minority,” Lowell Women’s Week, University of Massachusetts Lowell. (I argued that the Deaf women of this study had to develop strategies to effectively work in both hearing and Deaf work environments. This often limited their options in their workplace.)
- 2004 “Motherwork, Deafness, and the Role of Activism in Families,” Embodied Workers in the New Economy Conference, Syracuse University.
- 2002 “On the Life History of a Deaf Woman,” Fieldwork in Contemporary Society Conference, UCLA’s LeRoy Neiman Center for the Study of American Society and Culture, University of California, Los Angeles.
- 2000 “Laura’s Story: The Construction of a Life History through Collaborative Communication,” Desegregating Disability Studies: An Interdisciplinary Discussion, Graduate Student Conference, Syracuse University.
- 2000 “Doing Feminism in an Eating Disorder Support Group,” University at Buffalo Graduate Student Conference, University at Buffalo.

Invited Talks

- 2010 “Feminist Methodologies: Challenges and Triumphs of Working Reflexively in Social Research,” Presentation to the University community, University of Massachusetts Lowell. (I was invited to discuss the concept of feminist methodologies and my research on politicians and Deaf women. The event was sponsored by the Center for Women and Work, the Division of Fine Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences, the Qualitative Research Network, and the Gender Studies Program.)
- 2007 “Artistic Representation of Gender, Bodies, and Ability,” Faculty Sponsor along with Julie Nash and Anne Mulvey, Featuring local artist Deborah Dixon, 2nd Annual Gender Studies Symposium, University of Massachusetts Lowell. (In this session, I had the students in my Sociology of Disability course provide presentations including artwork and a critical analysis of the body that used theories of disability along with two other classes and the artwork of Deborah Dixon.)
- 2007 “Deaf Mothers, Maternal Thinking, and Intersections of Gender and Ability,” Guest Lecturer in Gender, Work, and Public Policy course,

University of Massachusetts Lowell. (I was asked to provide an analysis of my research concerning Deaf women and their work as mothers.)

- 2006 “Between Worlds:” Deaf Women’s Education, Family, and Work Experiences,” Center for Women and Work: Faculty Associates Panel, 1st Annual Gender Studies Symposium, University of Massachusetts Lowell. (I was invited to provide a summary and analysis of my research with Deaf women.)
- 2006 “Deaf Women Negotiating Work and Family Balances,” Panel Presentation to the Center for Women and Work Graduate Student Seminar, University of Massachusetts Lowell. (I presented my research to a community of graduate students and also discussed my methodological approach.)
- 2006 “The Bilingual Work of Deaf Mothers: Gender, Ability, and Maternal Thinking,” Presentation to the Salon, Faculty Colloquium in the Fine Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences, University of Massachusetts Lowell. (I was invited to give a talk about my research with Deaf women along with my analysis.)
- 2006 Radio Interview with Christine Dunlap, Sunrise 91.5 FM, WUML, University of Massachusetts Lowell. (I was invited to discuss my research with Deaf women and my book.)
