POLITICAL SCIENCE MAJOR

Core Courses (5 classes / 15 credits)

1) POLI 1010 Introduction to American Politics. This course is normally taken in the fall or spring semester of the Freshman Year. (Freshmen should take the designated majors only section if possible.)

2) POLI 1120 Introduction to Comparative Politics OR POLI 1210 Introduction to International Relations. This course should be taken in the Freshman Year or shortly after transferring.

3) POLI 2010 Political Analysis. This course examines claims to knowledge in political science. It is normally taken during the sophomore year.

4) POLI 3010 Research Methods in Political Science. This course focuses on understanding arguments grounded in numbers and data. The goal is to gain experience in generating accurate statistical claims and recognizing misleading ones.

5) POLI 4960 Practicum or POLI 4970 Practicum in the Law provides 75-100 hours of practical experience in politics, government, or law. The 3 credit practicum will be graded satisfactory or unsatisfactory. With advanced arrangement, 3 credits of the Washington Center will count as this requirement (all other Center credits are FAHSS general electives). Only one practicum may count toward the 120 credits required for graduation.

Additional Courses (7 classes / 21 credits)

In addition to the five core courses, majors take at least 7 other classes (21 credits) in Political Science for a total of at least 36 credits.

The Department focuses on four main fields within the discipline: American Politics, International Politics, Law & Politics, and Political Communication. Majors choose one area of focus, in which they take the following courses:

1) American Politics, Government, and Policy: at least 5 courses in this area + at least 1 International course + 1 additional course in any area of political science

2) International Relations & Comparative Politics: at least 5 courses in this area + at least 1 American Course (or a Law & Politics Course or Political Communication & Public Opinion Course with an American focus) + 1 additional course in any area of political science

3) Law & Politics: at least 5 courses in this area + at least 1 International course (or Political Communication & Public Opinion Course with an International focus) + 1 additional course in any area of political science

4) Political Communication & Public Opinion: at least 5 courses in this area + at least 1 International course (or a Law & Politics Course with an International focus) + 1 additional course in any area of political science
One of these advanced courses must be a Seminar, which is a small class of advanced students, focused on more intensive writing than usual classes. The topics of seminar courses will vary each semester with the interests of department faculty. An alternative to a standard Seminar course is to select 46.401 Research Seminar in Political Science after prior discussion with a professor. This individualized course requires an extensive research paper. The course can be taken in conjunction with a regular course in the same or subsequent semester, working with that professor to produce a research project in addition to the normal work of that course.

Minimum Credits: 36
Maximum Political Science Credits That Can Be Counted Toward Graduation: 45
Minimum Credits at 300 Level or Above: 18 (46.301, 46.496 or 46.497 count toward this requirement)

Areas of Focus

American Politics:

Career Goal: federal government agencies, local government, military service, social movement activism, non-profit organizations, public policy

Focus: American government students examine a wide range of political beliefs and ideologies, political institutions, and citizen engagement in politics from many methodological perspectives.

International Politics:

Career Goal: international organizations, NGOs, foreign service, security studies, peace and development studies, private sector, military service

Focus: Comparative Politics analyzes political and social phenomena within countries, and systematically compares various political and development outcomes. International Relations studies present and past global interactions among state and non-state actors and their impact on issues ranging from foreign policy to human rights and environmental sustainability. Students will explore different world regions (Europe, Latin America, Asia, Middle East, Africa), issues related to global peace, conflict, and security, and substantial economic and social issues.

Political Communication:

Career Goal: political campaign management, journalism, public opinion polling, public relations

Focus: Political communication concentrates on the flow and content of information and ideas in both domestic and international politics. Students examine public opinion data, strategies of rhetoric, and the influence of political messages on citizen beliefs and behaviors.

Law & Politics:

Career Goal: law school and a legal career

Focus: Law and politics students take several courses designed to explain legal concepts, the institutions of American law, and constitutional debates. They develop deep skills of arguing, processing information, clear writing, and effective speaking. See pages 14 and 15 for further discussion of law school preparation. The goal of this focus is development of broad skills in addition to political knowledge, admission to law school, success in law school, and preparation for a legal career.
Undergraduate Education at UML

1) Broad Exposure to Knowledge & Skills (Breadth of Knowledge Requirements)
   a. Write (2 classes)
      i. College Writing I & II
   b. Understand Numbers (1)
      i. Intro Statistics (Math 2830)
   c. Have Experience in All Three Areas of Knowledge (9)
      i. Humanities (3)
      ii. Social Sciences (3)
      iii. Sciences (3)
   d. Total Classes for Breadth of Knowledge: Roughly 12 classes (36 credits)

2) Major
   a. Focus of study
   b. Gain skills of analyzing well and communicating well
      i. Thinking
      ii. Speaking
      iii. Writing
   c. Total Classes for Major: Roughly 12 classes (36 credits)

3) Minor
   a. Solid Options:
      i. Legal Studies
      ii. Criminal Justice
      iii. Economics
      iv. History
      v. Psychology
      vi. Peace & Conflict Studies
   b. Usually 6 classes (18 credits), with no basic requirements
   c. Advice:
      i. Pick one early and feel free to switch or gain multiple minors
      ii. Will end up focusing small (minor) or large (2nd major)
   d. Total Classes for Minor: Roughly 6 classes (18 credits)

Collaborative Research

The Political Science Department and the College of Fine Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences encourage students to partner with faculty on research projects. Our faculty have a diverse set of research interests employing a number of theoretical and methodological approaches. These research partnerships are a great way to engage more deeply with ideas that intrigue you, develop research and analysis skills, and strengthen job and postgraduate education applications.

Students might have a project in mind (which can also become a senior thesis) or may be able to join faculty projects already in progress. If you are interested in working with a faculty member, contact them or visit them during office hours. Instructors of either of our two required research methods classes can also direct you appropriately.

A number of programs offer students pay or credit to participate in faculty research. However, this list is not exhaustive. Faculty may have access to other funds to pay students as research assistants.

Honors College Student Fellowships
Application deadline: Early September of each academic year
Open to: All Honors College Students
Work Commitment: 100 hours
Administrative Office: Honors College
Stipend: $1000
Course Credit? No

Emerging Scholars
Application Deadline: Late March of each academic year
Open to: All rising Junior or Senior students with a GPA of 3.25 or higher
Work Commitment: 250 hours across full academic year
Administrative Office: Center for Women and Work
Stipend: $2500
Course Credit? No

From the Center for Women and Work:
Emerging Scholars will provide students with a unique year-long opportunity to apply the theoretical knowledge gained from courses at UMass Lowell to a faculty member’s on-going research while enhancing knowledge of research methods, technical skills, and research presentation. Working collaboratively with a faculty partner will allow students to gain a unique learning experience unlike any they will receive in a classroom as well as to work one-on-one with a faculty mentor.

Course Credit: 1-3 credits, listed as POLI4910
Law School Preparation

Students considering a legal career should ask themselves three questions:

1) Do I want to go to law school?

Gain as much experience as possible in legal endeavors before deciding. Mock Trial is an excellent avenue. You can do a practicum in a local law office. We recommend attending a class at a local law school (Boston College, Boston University, Northeastern, Suffolk) to see what you make of it. Discuss your plans with your Political Science advisor and with the Pre-Law advisor (Walter Toomey). Another aspect to consider is the considerable cost of law school, which must be repaid from future earnings; this is only feasible if you do well in law school and find solid employment thereafter in a competitive market. The legal profession is not for the faint-hearted.

2) How should I prepare for admission to law school?

Law school admissions depend most heavily on GPA and LSAT scores. Specific majors are not important for law school admissions; the key is to have a high grade point average. Anything that makes you unusual can also help the prospects for admission and scholarships: Mock Trial experience, research accomplishments, minority status, travel experience, work experience in the legal field, etc. The same candidate may gain admission to a higher ranked school at the full tuition rate and be accepted at a lower ranked school with a considerable scholarship (e.g. paying full tuition at BC or half tuition at Suffolk). You will have to balance the costs versus the potential long-term payouts of a more prestigious legal education. Because of the importance of the LSAT score, you will want to set aside a period of time (at least 1 month full time or 2 months half-time) to prepare for the exam. UML offers an excellent prep course free of charge, taught by Walter Toomey (Instructor in Legal Studies).

3) How should I prepare to do well in law school?

Admission to law school is one thing, but success there is another. Future job prospects will depend on your rank within your law school class and distinctions such as serving on the law review (reserved for students in approximately the top quarter of their class). The Law & Politics curriculum within Political Science is the best preparation for success in law school, which is aided by experience analyzing arguments, writing, and having as much background as possible in legal concepts and application. We recommend taking Law & the Legal System (POLI 2300), Constitutional Law I & II (POLI 3350 and 3370), the Supreme Court Seminar (POLI 3390), and Foundations of Law (POLI 3110). Foundations of Law was designed specifically for students in their junior or senior year who are considering law school. The core courses in the first year of law school in addition to Constitutional Law (with some variation among law schools) are Contracts, Torts, Property, Civil Procedure, and Criminal Procedure. Foundations of Law introduces you to several of these fields, while preparing you for the case briefing approach common to the first-year law courses. We highly recommend all students considering law school take this course. We also recommend completing a minor in Legal Studies, Criminal Justice, History, Psychology, or Philosophy. The key is maintaining high grades while gaining useful skills in analysis and communication.

FAQ

Are the Political Science faculty interesting people?

Yes. See our web page for details: https://www.uml.edu/FAHSS/Political-Science/faculty/default.aspx

Who is in charge of this place?

Our Department Chair is Ardeth Thawnghmung. Her office is in 201A Dugan. Our Department Administrator is Jeanette Anderson, in 201AA Dugan as you walk into the Department office. They are happy to help with any questions you may have.

When should I see my advisor?

At least once a semester. Make an appointment during advising to discuss courses, future plans, and opportunities around the university.

Can I change advisors?

Yes. See Jeanette Anderson or the Department Chair. They will assign an advisor matched to your interests.

How do I apply AP credits?

AP scores usually come out in August. Check your SIS account to see if they have been applied. See https://www.uml.edu/Catalog/Undergraduate/Policies/Admissions-Policies/Advanced-Placement-Policies.aspx#Advanced

Do I need to take a language?

Yes. The College of Fine Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences requires all students to take 4 semesters of the same language (Spanish, German, French, Italian, Portuguese, Arabic, etc.). An alternative is to take 2 semesters of a language and 3 courses on the politics, history, or literature of that region (e.g. Spanish Literature or German Politics). Please see https://www.uml.edu/Catalog/Undergraduate/FAHSS/Policy/Language-Requirements-FAHSS.aspx.

1. Student A is a transfer student who arrives on campus with TRANSFER CREDITS for Spanish 1 and Spanish 2. Student A could do either of the following:
   —Choose the “World Languages” option: Take Spanish 3 and Spanish 4, and have this requirement complete.
   —Choose the “World Ready” option: Take three designated courses (9 credits) in Spanish Language & culture (taught in English) and have this requirement complete.

2. Student B arrives on campus having earned a 3 or 4 on the AP German Language and Culture course. Following the University’s process explained in the catalog, the student is awarded 6 credits for German — WLGE.1010 & 1020. Student B could do either of the following:
Choose the “World Languages” option: Take German 3 and German 4, and have this requirement complete.

Choose the “World Ready” option: Take three designated courses (9 credits) in German Language & culture (taught in English), and have this requirement complete.

3. Student C arrives on campus with a working knowledge of French, but no credits in the language (no test credits, no transfer credits). The student takes the on-campus placement test here at UML and is placed into French 3. Student C could do either of the following:

—Choose the “World Languages” option: Take French 3, and French 4 to complete the requirement.

—Choose the “World Ready” option: Take French 2 and French 3 and then three more approved French cultural courses. This would complete her language requirement.

If I already speak a language, do I have to study a new one?

No. If you are fluent in a language, you can petition for credit with the Modern Language Placement Exam, given every January. If you pass you will be given credit for 1 to 4 classes in the language, depending on your level of proficiency. Contact MLP_exam@uml.edu.

How do I find a Practicum opportunity?

The Practicum in Political Science is a combination of a course (POLI 4960) and an internship encompassing 75—100 hours of practical experience. Please see the Practicum Guide on the following pages. There are many opportunities in local government, political organizations, social movements, law offices, and other avenues. The Washington Semester also counts as the practicum.

The Practicum is organized by Professor John Cluverius. Please contact him in to have a practicum experience approved. The practicum can be undertaken at any time, but it must be approved by Professor Cluverius before it is begun.

How many courses can I delete?

Up to 15 credits (7 credits if a student transferred to UML with 60 or more credits). See https://www.uml.edu/Catalog/Undergraduate/Policies/Academic-Policies/Repeated-Coursework-and-Course-Deletions.aspx

Do I need to declare a concentration for the Political Science Major?

Yes. The possible concentrations are American Politics, International Politics, Law & Politics, or Political Communication. You will focus on classes within a specific concentration, but can also take interesting classes in the other areas.

Do I need to declare a concentration for the Political Science Minor?

No. The Minor is any six classes in any of the concentrations.

The PS faculty and staff seem weirdly nice and knowledgeable—is this true?

Yes, yes it is.
A Guide to Practicum Opportunities

The following list includes present opportunities and past examples of internships and practical experiences conducted by UML students. Individual students should be creative in pursuing their own interests.
